What was Bobbi Brown's beverage of choice when she named this year's holiday makeup line? The collection, Scotch on the Rocks, plays off the silky bronze and amber shades of this complex whisky. Available at Bobbi Brown counters and WWW.BOBBIBROWNCOSMETICS.COM.

PASCAL POUR ELLE... 30 YEARS BEAUTIFUL

Pascal Ibgui launched his namesake salon in 1985 and now, three decades later, has outposts in Glencoe, Glenview and Chicago. "I love what I do, but I can't sit still when we have the opportunity to refine and constantly improve on the services and products we deliver to our clients," says the salon owner, with his irresistible French accent. And his plans for the next three decades? A recently launched online tool and iPad app, the Online Product Consultant, which helps determine the most effective products for a client's tresses. "Sure, I could take a step back, or even retire," he muses, but "I'm having way too much fun doing what I love and discovering new methods along the way. Why stop now?" WWW.PASCALPOURELLE.COM

A Woman's Right...To Reclaim Wow! Sex

Lauren Streicher, MD

Here's a blatant example of gender inequality: men have 24 drugs to treat sexual dysfunction while women have nada! Lauren Streicher, MD, Gynecologic Specialists of Northwestern, is all too familiar with this grave injustice. "Even if someone discovers the perfect pill that will keep women lubricated, interested and orgasmic, the chance that the FDA will approve that pill is unlikely," explains the author of Love Sex Again. Dr. Streicher also notes, "It's hard to argue that the FDA is just being careful when only 3,000 men were in the trial to get Viagra approved, but Flibanserin and testosterone tested over 10,000 women and were rejected despite demonstrating efficacy and safety." And as Dr. Streicher keeps advocating for a woman's right to have good sex, she'll continue to educate the masses on what they can do...for now. Perhaps it's time to contact Dick Durbin and Mark Kirk about this gross disparity. Visit www.drstreicher.com for more on Dr. Streicher's books and speaking engagements.
